Products are tested regularly for product purity

One product from select brands in the Fullscript catalog is tested quarterly for contaminants like pesticides, microbes, solvents, and heavy metals.

Products contain the optimal dose for desired outcomes

Generic brands found in common large online resellers often contain lower potency of active ingredients, which means patients need to consume more to reach recommended requirements.

Products come from secured and trusted sources and no third-party resellers

Nearly 60% of purchases on Amazon are from third-party resellers.*

Feedback loops with brand partners to investigate any widespread quality issues

Many large online resellers can't always pinpoint the source of their products. As a result, counterfeit, contamination, and storage issues may affect the quality of supplements.

Storage, shipping, handling, and expiration date standards to reduce the risk of short-dated products

Fullscript follows a "first-in, first-out" policy to ensure that nothing is shipped with less than three months of shelf life remaining.

Brands are vetted by healthcare practitioners

Fullscript's Integrative Medical Advisory Team ensures the brands in our catalog are committed to patient health.
